Ebola threat affecting Liberian community

Ebola hysteria hits US shores

The Ebola outbreak in West Africa crossed to our shores last week with the death of a Texas man, but panic has been fervent for weeks with patients fearing every flu-like symptom is a sign they instead have the deadly disease.

BY THE NUMBERS

Death toll

4,447

The death toll so far in the outbreak has reached 4,447 from a total of 8,914 cases.

New cases

5K-10K

By the first week in December, WHO projections suggest there may be between 5,000 and 10,000 new cases a week.

Mortality

70%

The actual mortality rate is about 70 percent, a figure that was consistent across the three worst-hit countries in Africa.

EBOLA SYMPTOMS

It is important to note that not everyone with flu will have a fever.

Symptoms may appear anywhere from 2 to 21 days after exposure to Ebola, but the average is eight to 10 days.

Staten Island.

Members of the NYC Liberian community said they are afraid for people back home and that the city must be prepared.

Another day, another Ebola scare in New York City. And though the very-real threat lingers, there still haven't been any confirmed cases in the city.

According to the city's Department of Hygiene and Mental Health and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's most recent numbers, 88 potential cases were reported by health care providers as of Oct. 6. Of those 88 cases, only 11 met the risk criteria; one patient tested negative and the remaining were diagnosed with illnesses such as malaria.

"It happened in Texas, it can happen here," said Oretta Bestman-Yates, president of the Staten Island Liberian Community Association. "It just took that one infected person to get on that plane to come."

Clifton, Staten Island, is home to the largest Liberian community outside of Africa. And while the virus is spreading in other West African countries such as Sierra Leone and Guinea, Bestman-Yates said Liberia, with more than 2,300 deaths so far according to the World Health Organization, is the "face of Ebola."

Bestman-Yates she said she was recently at an airport when a reporter called to talk about Ebola. "People moved away from me," she said, when she mentioned Liberia on the phone.

And though media attention has other hurtful effects for Liberians in New York, Bestman-Yates believes the attention is an educational opportunity.

"We have to be prepared for the worst, we can't assume it won't come here," Bestman-Yates said.

NYC. Bellevue has unit for Ebola patients

Bellevue worker
GETTY IMAGES

The New York City Department of Hygiene and Mental Health and Hospitals Corporation announced earlier this week that Bellevue Hospital will primarily serve any Ebola patients in the future.

The country's oldest public hospital, on First Avenue between 26th and 28th streets, has a special unit to treat patients with the virus.

The city's private and public hospitals continue to run Ebola drills. A "bud-dy system" is being used at the city's public hospitals, according to HHC, to make sure health care workers stick to "infection control protocol."

On Monday, two patients tested negative for Ebola at Bellevue, according to the HHC.

The HHC maintains health care workers and first responders have received Ebola training and supplies to deter contamination since July. METRO

Affected

Not a joking matter

Paul Tuiider, president of the Liberian Communities of New York, said many Liberians he knows don't like the heightened media attention.

"Our image is at stake," Tuiider said, adding his young niece, born in America, is the subject of "Ebola jokes" at school, and adults are the subject of negative comments at work.

With all the perceptions in New York, Tuiider said the main concern of many Liberians is raising money to send back home to their family members there.

"We're hoping with the great help of the government it won't spread. ... Hopefully the international community will help stop it," Tuiider said.

Woman's body found in East River

A woman's body was pulled out of the East River on Wednesday morning.

The police received a 911 call at 7:20 a.m. for a person who was seen floating in the water in the East River and the Rutgers Slip area.

The NYPD Harbor patrol responded to the scene where they found and removed an unidentified female estimated to be in her 40s from the water.

The woman's body was transported to Pier 16 where she was pronounced DOA.

The medical examiner will determine the cause of death and the NYPD say that the investigation is ongoing.

The woman's name is not being released pending family notification. METRO

Bushwick. Men beat transgender woman

The NYPD is looking for four suspects who allegedly beat a 28-year-old transgender woman over the weekend.

The victim was attacked Saturday at 11:20 p.m. in front of 1250 Bushwick Ave.

The four men approached the victim from behind and made "anti-gay statements," police said.

They proceeded to kick and punch her, and threw a Plexiglas board at her head, which caused a serious injury.

She was taken to Elmhurst Hospital and remains there in critical condition. The NYPD is investigating the assault as a hate crime. Members of the LGBT community gathered for a protest in the area where the attack happened on Tuesday night. The police released a video showing two of the suspects on Wednesday.

NYC. After decades in prison, man freed at prosecutor's request

Nearly three decades into a prison sentence he began as a teenager, a man who was championed by boxer Rubin "Hurricane" Carter walked free on Wednesday after a judge vacated his murder conviction at a prosecutor's request.

David McCallum was 16 years old in 1986 when a jury in Brooklyn found him and Willie Stuckey, Jr. guilty of kidnapping and murdering Nathan Blenner. McCallum, now 45, had been in a state prison ever since. Stuckey died in prison in 2001.

After reviewing their cases, Ken Thompson, Brooklyn's district attorney, asked Judge Matthew D'Emic to quash the convictions, saying both men's confessions were false and contradicted by evidence.

Sitting beside Stuckey's mother, McCallum sobbed, as the judge said he and Stuckey were exonerated.

"I'm very, very happy

Not bitter

McCallum said he was not bitter, but called the justice system "broken" and said he planned to speak out on the issue of wrongful convictions.

- Rubin Carter, the former professional boxer who spent 19 years in prison on what was later ruled a wrongful murder conviction, became an advocate for McCallum, and before his death in April, said it was his final wish that McCallum be released.

but very, very sad at the same time because this situation in some ways could have been avoided," McCallum said.

Thompson said "not a single piece of evidence" linked the two men to the crime. REUTERS

The weather outside may still be warm, but Rockefeller Center recently opened its ice skating rink for the winter season. This marks the first season that people can buy an unlimited skating pass that allows them to bypass the line to skate at the rink. The rink will be open through April 2015. The iconic rink was first opened in 1936 and more than a quarter million people hit the ice there every year.

Second nurse with Ebola had a slight fever on airplane

A statement from the CDC and Frontier Airlines said Vinson flew out of Dallas/Fort Worth on Friday and flew back home to Dallas on Frontier Flight 1143 on Monday. / GETTY IMAGES

Spread. Although the risk for other passengers was low, the CDC said the nurse should not have been traveling.

A second Texas nurse who contracted Ebola flew on a commercial flight from Ohio to Texas with a slight temperature the day before she was diagnosed, health officials said on Wednesday, raising new concerns about U.S. efforts to control the disease.

Chances that other passengers on the plane were infected were very low, but the nurse should not have been traveling on the flight, U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention director Dr. Thomas Frieden told reporters.

The woman, Amber Vinson, 29, was isolated immediately after reporting a fever on Tuesday, Texas Department of State Health Services officials said. She had treated Liberian patient Thomas Eric Duncan, who died of Ebola on Oct. 8 and was the first patient diagnosed with the virus in the United States.

Vinson, a worker at Texas Health Presbyterian Hospital in Dallas, had taken a Frontier Airlines flight from Cleveland, Ohio to Dallas/Fort Worth International Airport on

Passengers

The CDC said that it was asking all of the more than 130 passengers who were also on the Frontier flight to call a CDC hotline.

Monday, officials said.

In Washington, President Barack Obama said the likelihood of a widespread Ebola outbreak was "very, very low." But he pledged a more aggressive response to U.S. Ebola cases from federal officials and to do everything possible to ensure no more health care workers are infected.

Obama met with Cabinet officials to discuss the government's response to the Ebola situation after canceling a planned political trip to New Jersey and Connecticut.

Government officials said Vinson was being transferred to Emory University Hospital in Atlanta, which has successfully treated two people who contracted the disease in West Africa and were flown back to the U.S.

Obama says health response teams readied

President Barack Obama said the government is forming rapid response teams of health specialists who can be on-site within 24 hours anywhere a patient is diagnosed with Ebola in the U.S.

As public concern over the spread of Ebola rises following the infection of two nurses in Dallas, Obama said the government is working to ensure that hospitals have proper protocols and training in place to contain the disease.

The federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention also is reviewing every step taken at the Dallas hospital that treated a Liberian man who has since died of Ebola, to determine what went wrong, he said.

Time Warner to launch HBO web streaming

Strategy. It could be a further catalyst spurring people to dump their cable subscriptions.

Time Warner Inc.'s HBO will launch a stand-alone online streaming service next year to make hit shows such as "Game of Thrones" available to people who do not subscribe to cable television.

The move to take HBO "over-the-top" — media jargon that means consumers can watch the channel with only a broadband connection — is a significant milestone for a channel long dependent on cable distributors.

HBO's chief executive, Richard Plepler, announced the move during an investor day on Wednesday where Time

Warner's other top executives laid out plans to boost the company's growth.

Plepler cited that 10 million homes in the United States are broadband-only, without cable subscriptions. Half of those homes subscribe to streaming video services. "These consumers have no access to HBO. It's a large opportunity that should not be untapped," he said.

Netflix Inc. shares were down 3.1 percent at $435.28 after the announcement.

"In 2015 we will go beyond the wall and launch a stand-alone, over-the-top service with the potential to produce hundreds of millions in revenue," Plepler said.

Plepler did not disclose further details about the forthcoming service, including the price. HBO currently allows cable subscribers to access its content on mobile devices through an app known as HBO Go.

Pump prices fall to lowest since 2011

Drop. Gasoline prices have fallen more than 50 cents this year since peaking at $3.696 in April.

Regular gasoline in the U.S. fell to the lowest level in more than three-and-a-half years as shale oil production and weak global demand spurred a four-month slump in oil prices.

U.S. drivers are reaping the benefit of strong global crude production and weak demand causing oil prices to drop more than a quarter since June.

"That's like somebody putting dollars right in your pocket," said David Hackett, president of Stillwater Associates, an energy consulting firm in Irvine, California. "That sounds like Christmas presents, going out to dinner, being able to do something."

Average retail price

The average retail price fell 0.9 cents a gallon to $3.177, Heathrow, Florida-based motoring group AAA said on its website Wednesday. That's the lowest level since February 2011, when the uprising started against Muammar Gaddafi that disrupted oil supplies from OPEC member Libya.

Global oil consumption will increase by about 650,000 barrels a day this year, the Paris-based International Energy Agency said in a monthly report on Tuesday. That's a reduction of 250,000 from its prior estimate. The International Monetary Fund said the global economy will expand by 3.8 percent in 2015. BLOOMBERG

Sentencing awaits. Steenkamp cousin testifies at Pistorius hearing

A cousin of Reeve Steenkamp broke down at the sentencing hearing of Oscar Pistorius as she recounted hearing on her car radio that the Olympic athlete had killed his girlfriend.

Proceedings at the High Court in Pretoria, South Africa's capital, were adjourned briefly before Kim Martin resumed describing how she tried to call Steenkamp before realizing that she was the person Pistorius had shot dead.

Martin was the first witness called by prosecutor Gerrie Nel at the hearing to determine what sentence Pistorius should receive for his conviction of manslaughter for the killing of Steenkamp at his home on Valentine's Day last year. Martin said Steenkamp and Pistorius weren't very affectionate when she had breakfast with them the previous month.

"His phone rang and he got up and left the table to answer the call. And when he walked away, I said to Reeve, 'So cuz, are you happy?'" Martin said. "She had a smile on her face and she pulled her shoulders up like this and she said 'Yes, but we need to talk.'"

Martin said she never forgave herself for not asking Reeve what she meant. She described the Steenkamp family as always short of money. As she testified, Steenkamp's father, Barry, broke down in tears.

Masipa cleared Pistorius of murder charges before convicting him of culpable homicide for killing Steenkamp when he fired four bullets through a bathroom door. Pistorius said he thought Steenkamp was an intruder. REUTERS

NYCWFF. Tour the city's Italian food scene at La Sagra Slices — then make it in your kitchen.

Fuhget about discussing the city's culinary scene without mentioning Italian food. But good luck getting anyone to agree on where to find the best. Enter Ronzoni's La Sagra Slices, which throws down the gauntlet to over two dozen chefs to battle it out for the best pizza and meatballs.

There's something for the home cooks, too.

You're already familiar with the Bongiovi family's most famous product, singer Jon Bon Jovi, who will be in attendance to launch his father's new line of pasta sauces.

Ahead of the big cookoff, we let a few of the participating chefs brag about what they do best — then give props to a fellow chef. Plan your next outing accordingly.

Danny Ye, Harlow

What dish do you do really well?

One dish that stands out is the cauliflower.

As a side dish, it gets marginalized but it is special because of its simplicity and it introduces Asian flavors to our diners. The cauliflower is crisped up with the aid of potato starch and then tossed with a spicy Korean miso, cilantro and roasted sesame seeds.

Recommendation: The spaghetti carbonara at Mario Batali's Otto. It is absolutely special because it is a dish that is often screwed up.

Ryan Hardy, Charlie Bird

What dish do you do really well?

The gnocchi rosa is one of our most famous dishes and the most surprising to our guests — on the surface, it appears to be the token "vegetarian" pasta dish that somehow always shows up on menus. The dish is ricotta gnocchi that are light as air with special tomatoes from Abruzzo.

Recommendation: If you're looking for New York-style pizza, it has to be the margherita at Lucali's in Carroll Gardens. If it's Neapolitan style, it has to be Franny's clam pizza in Park Slope.

At Harlow, Danny Ye, inset, doesn't let side dishes slack off just because they're not the focus. / PROVIDED

Tips

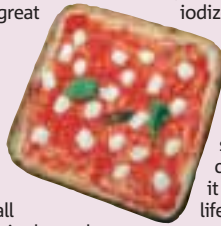

How can home cooks make their dishes more flavorful?

Campanaro: Use quality ingredients — go to a specialty Italian food store and source really great olive oil from Tuscany, or Parmigiano-Reggiano from Emilia-Romagna. It will cost you a little more, but it makes all the difference in the end product.

Hardy: The majority of home cooks need three upgrades when I walk into their kitchen: good salt, top-quality olive oil and better cookware. Next time, throw away the iodized, spend as much on a bottle of olive oil as you do on a bottle of wine, and splurge on cookware — it can last a lifetime.

Ye: Utilize a mortar and pestle to make salsas and sauces, and toast your dry seasonings/spices before using them."

Joey Campanaro, The Little Owl

What dish do you do really well?

Since we opened The Little Owl back in 2006, one of the most popular orders has been our gravy meatball sliders. People just go crazy for them, and I think it is because they are simple and well executed.

Recommendation: I am completely obsessed with the zucchini, toasted almonds and pecorino at my boy Jimmy Bradley's place, The Red Cat.

Esurance SavorBand

The free wristband, which can be picked up at any event on the Esurance Rooftop at Pier 92, can be tapped against digital stations at every chef and restaurant's booth — because it can get difficult to keep track if you're sampling all 20-plus burgers at the Blue Moon Burger Bash.

Once tapped, the SavorBand records recipes, images, promotions and other information. When you get home, just plug in the USB, enter the code on the wristband at www.esurance.com/savorband and "Bam!" — an instant resource for all the dishes you'll be craving until next year.

NYCWFF. Comedian/
chef Mo Rocca
emcees an elevated barbecue of the street fare favorite.

When it comes to food, Mo Rocca knows when to defer to others' expertise: As host of "My Grandmother's Ravioli" on the Cooking Channel, he learns the recipes of families across the country in their own kitchens.

But this weekend at the New York City Wine

& Food Festival, he's keeping to simpler fare at Hot Dog Happy Hour. The city's unofficial street food has been enjoying a renaissance, moving into restaurants and gaining some gourmet — and offbeat — toppings.

We caught up with the former "Daily Show" correspondent for a taste of the tasting event. (Hot tip: Take a trip to Mexico to find truly "extravagant" hot dogs.)

First of all, why hot dogs?
I like a meal you can eat on the run, though I'm aware that walking while eating puts undue strain on the heart. I believe that LBJ's first heart attack (in 1955) was caused by both his 60-cigarettes-per-day habit — and his habit of eating hamburgers while walking. (Actually, I might be imagining the latter.)

What do you like on your hot dog?

I love a chili dog with onions and relish and sauerkraut. (And if you're lucky, you'll get to make out with me right afterward.)

Funny business

What's harder, being funny or cooking a good meal?

Cooking a good meal requires the right ingredients, a decent recipe, steady hands and practice. It's not rocket science (unless it's baking, which is more of a science). So I'd say being funny is much harder, as evidenced by this answer.

4 Brunches to try this fall

New Yorkers are a year-round brunch crowd, but when the standard menu is revamped for fall's hearty flavors, well, it doesn't get much better than that. Here are four brunch spots you absolutely must try while autumn ingredients are still in season. EMILY LAURENCE

Louie & Chan

If you wake up craving something savory, the wood oven-baked eggs, tomato, buffalo mozzarella and Parmigiano cheese will hit the spot. Have more of a sweet spot? The French toast made with bread pudding, Nutella, maple-buttered bananas and spiced walnuts is one of its most popular fall items. 303 Broome St., louieandchan.com

L'Apicio

L'Apicio got creative with its brunch menu for fall, adding cornmeal pancakes with blueberry, pecan streusel and creme fraiche and a savory Parmesan French toast with prosciutto cotto and fried egg. Still hungry? Add a side of polenta, broccoli rabe or Tuscan fries. 1578 First Ave., lapicio.com

Awadh

Autumn has us craving flavorful food, so there's no better time to try this newly opened Upper West Side Indian restaurant. The three-course menu focuses on northern Indian specialties such as an Indian egg curry and scrambled egg naan "burrito." The lentil flour papadums with onion, tamarind and cilantro relish are also a standout. 2588 Broadway, awadhnyc.com

Ducks Eatery

East Village BBQ spot Ducks Eatery really outdid itself for fall. From the pumpkin waffles topped with pecan butter and praline syrup to the smoked brisket hash with red onion, there is no shortage of food on the menu to keep you warm, full and satisfied. The shrimp and grits with andouille sausage is also a must-try. 351 E. 12th St., duckseatery.com

1 Harry Styles heading in the wrong direction

Harry Styles is looking a little bit Wolverine-ish these days, and apparently he's behaving like an animal, too!

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Harry Styles' friends are worried about him — and with good reason. Styles was recently photographed in the natural habitat of a 20-year-old celebrity on a break from his pop group's arena tour: puking his guts out on the side of an LA freeway the morning after a night out with Lily Allen. You know, that old story. While he's been getting sick, his friends have been worried sick. "He has been worrying everyone for quite some time now," a source tells Radar Online. "Those close to him have urged him to slow down. But he lives by the seam of his pants and thinks that he is invincible. Clearly, he is not." Could this source have meant to say "by the seat of his pants"? I'm not familiar with what living by the "seam" of your pants is, exactly, but hey, language is a fluid beast. Boot and rally, Harry. Boot and rally.

2 Chris Brown weighs in on Ebola — finally!

Chris Brown decided to ruminate on the Ebola crisis, and the results are, well, this: "I don't know ... But I think this Ebola epidemic is a form of population control. S— is getting crazy bruh." Indeed, bruh. Then he followed that up with "Let me shut my black ass up!" Later, in what I'm assuming is a response to criticism, he tweeted, "I say what I want. If u don't like it.... 'SUCK MY ASS' (little Asian girl voice)." Charming, eh?

You stay classy, Chris Brown.

NPH one step closer to a hosting EGOT

It might have seemed inevitable, but it's still news: Two-time Emmy Awards and four-time Tony Awards host Neil Patrick Harris has been tapped for the big show. The "Gone Girl" and "How I Met Your Mother" star will serve as host for the 87th Academy Awards on February 22, 2015, producers Craig Zadan and Neil Meron announced today. Harris has earned four Emmys for his work hosting the Tonys.

Gaga gets engaged

Lady Gaga and her "Chicago Fire" star beau, Taylor Kinney, have reportedly pledged their love to each other or something like that in a private commitment ceremony, according to the Daily Star. The couple reportedly had a commitment ceremony of sorts before family and close friends at New York City restaurant Joan Trattoria recently. "Gaga wanted something visual, a commitment ceremony with the people who matter the most," a source says. Good to see they didn't go full-on Kanye with it and rent out a stadium.

Justin Simien sparks debate

Interview. The director of the provocative "Dear White People" talks reactions good and bad.

a lot of conversations — and more than a few Spike Lee comparisons.

Can you sum up how the past nine months of your life have felt?

JUSTIN SIMIEN
GETTY IMAGES

It's been weird, man. [Laughs] It's been nine years on this project in particular, and for it to come together and for people to be actually interested in talking to me and talking about the movie and reacting to it, it's kind of weird to take in. But it's cool and it's very gratifying, especially to see the conversations — at least the positive conversations — that the movie provokes in people that have actually seen it.

What about some of the more negative conversations?

Most of the negative stuff comes from people who haven't seen the movie — people who are just reacting to the title or what they think the movie might be about it. But I think my favorite explanation from it is from this

Side by side

Justin and Spike

What do you think of the possibly somewhat reductive Spike Lee comparisons?

I mean, it is lazy, but I have to say it's also really flattering because Spike's my hero. And the movies they're referencing, "School Daze" and "Do the Right Thing," are iconic films for me as a filmmaker and as a black person who likes movies. I don't think people are comfortable saying, "Oh, this is the new Bergman" — which I'm not, by the way. But I think it naturally occurs to people that filmmakers of color go in one category, and gay filmmakers and women go here, and everybody else is just cinema in general. [Laughs] And they can be compared to all kinds of people. On a certain level, I totally get it and welcome it. But on another level, I'd love to see what people think of me after I have a couple of films under my belt. Like, what is a Justin Simien film? I only made one, so it's hard to say.

woman named Rachel J. Watkin, a professor who said that when people are confronted by the complaints or thoughts or feelings of one minority or the other, they have to sort of go through the five stages of grief. And some people tend to stay in anger and denial a little bit longer than we hope for them to, but at least they've begun the process. So I can only hope that's what it is that I'm seeing. Because when you're on the Internet, people can be kind of vicious.

Even if they know who you are, they can be kind of vicious.

Well, they know who I am. I have no idea who they are. Their icon is just, I don't know, Raven-Symone smoking a cigarette. There's no way to tell who these people are. [Laughs]

'Fury'

1 Some are complaining that this war movie in which Brad Pitt kills Nazis is not "Inglourious Basterds." Look, Pitt is good at killing Nazis, so why not another, more serious one, this time with Logan Lerman and Shia LaBeouf?

'The Book of Life'

2 Horror and fantasy guru Guillermo del Toro ("Pacific Rim," "The Strain") tries his hand at children's animation, putting his name on this tale of a young man hopping through multiple realms. Diego Luna, Zoe Saldana and Channing Tatum lend their voices.

Brad Pitt and the team of "Fury" hang out on their World War II tank. / GILES KEYTE

'The Best of Me'

3 Here's yet another Nicholas Sparks movie, and we're going to assume there's a hesitant romance in a pretty location and almost certainly a comically melodramatic third-act twist. James Marsden and Michelle Monaghan star in this one.

'Birdman'

4 Get this: Michael Keaton plays a fading actor who once headlined a comic book franchise about a winged superhero and is now putting on an ambitious Broadway show. Perhaps more interestingly, this comedy is all done as a fake single shot, thanks to "Babel" director Alejandro Gonzalez Inarritu.

'Listen Up Philip'

5 Filmmaker Alex Ross Perry ("The Color Wheel") graduates to name actors, with Jason Schwartzman as a novelist who decides to become a nightmare, even to his girlfriend (Elisabeth Moss).

'Dear White People'

6 One of Sundance's most deserving hits, this comedic drama examines racial tension and black identity at an Ivy League school in the face of a black-themed party put on by white students.

'Rudderless'

7 William H. Macy heads behind the camera for this musical dramedy about an exec-turned-loner (Billy Crudup) who discovers a box of songs written by his son, who died in a campus shooting.

'The Tale of Princess Kaguya'

8 Japan's beloved Studio Ghibli has temporarily (at least) halted production, so make sure to enjoy their new one, about a princess so tiny that she fits in the hand of the bamboo merchant who finds her.

'Camp X-Ray'

9 Kristen Stewart tries her hand at intimate drama, playing a Gitmo guard who strikes up a hesitant friendship with a longtime detainee.

Caroline de Maigret: 'Anyone can be Parisian'

"People praise the effortlessness of French women, but they don't realize that it's actually an effort to look effortless," says Caroline de Maigret, glancing down at her black sweater, skinny Lee jeans and Stan Smith sneakers. Born an aristocrat, the 39-year-old has never exactly slumped it. Her new book, "How to Be Parisian Wherever You Are: Love, Style, and Bad Habits," co-written by journalist Audrey Diwan, writer Anne Berest and movie producer Sophie Bas, could read as an ode to the privileged — but the style tome steers clear of preachiness, instead debunking myths in an ironic look at the lives of French women.

How did you come up with the idea to write this book?

Every time I travel abroad,

"Anyone in the world can be Parisian — it's all about the attitude," says Maigret. / PROVIDED

I'm asked about "La Parisienne." I realized that there were a lot of clichés around the Parisian lady, who has kind of been crowned the "ideal woman." It's strange for me because "La Parisienne" is actually a lady who doesn't try to reach perfection but learns how to deal with who she is and how to play with her flaws instead of fighting them. So with my three friends, we decided to show that these women were everything but perfect.

Who do you think is the chicest Parisian woman?

Charlotte Rampling is incredibly chic. She is feminine with an androgynous edge and, most importantly, she is a bright woman. She might be British, but she is one of the most Parisian people ever — just like Jane Birkin or Romy Schneider, who were born abroad but epitomize Parisian style, which is precisely why we made this book. Anyone in the world can be Parisian; it's all about the attitude.

Who is the chicest man?

I always say Keith Richards, but my man [French Interview. The model's new book unravels the "je ne sais quoi" behind French style.

Inspirations

Who is your favorite fashion designer?

Karl Lagerfeld. He is always ahead of his time: He knows everything about fashion, literature and the arts in general. I think that fashion is linked to society, even if for me it's just a way to have fun, and he knows exactly how to transfer society to fashion, without ever forgetting to add in some humor.

Define your ultimate goals

"What is it that you want from your life?" asks Kolakowski. "How can we reprioritize to get what you want? Are you valuing your anxiety over a potential relationship?"

If you feel like you are letting your anxiety run your life, working on relaxation techniques and tracking your emotions can help you separate your social anxiety from the reality of the situation. When it comes to relationships, "it is only going to get easier with time," she says.

A dating guide for the socially anxious

Tips. Looking for love doesn't have to be so hard.

relationship if they want to be." We asked her for her tips for anxious daters.

Accept yourself

A lack of self-confidence and self-acceptance are two of the biggest problems anxious people face, says Kolakowski. "You can learn how to accept your anxiety," says Kolakowski. "People think that if there is anxiety, that means I can't date. My anxiety doesn't have to define me."

Don't take all the blame

One of the worst things an anxious person can do while dating is assume all of the blame when things don't work out. "Remember that dating is 50-50," says Kolakowski. "It's not all on your shoulders." Obviously, your dating partner plays a big part in how things ultimately turn out. "Dating doesn't always work out, and that's OK," she reminds readers.

You can do it

Anxious people tend to endlessly ruminate on mistakes. In those cases, Kolakowski urges clients to take a step back. "Why are they telling themselves this story?" she asks. "Because these are all stories. ... You can say, 'My story can include love again.'"

Obama has experts

Re: 'Uncertainty over Ebola' (Metro, Oct. 15) I guess that letter writer Sal Giarranti has graduated from medical school and has knowledge allowing him to challenge President Obama and Gov. Deval Patrick on their claims about Ebola's transmission. I would remind him that the president and governors have advisers and staff members with expertise in several topics, including medicine, and their job is to provide the right information to their bosses.

They were joking, but that's essentially what we do by trying to tax the foreign operations of corporations. The impulse is understandable: Corporations should not be able to hide U.S. income by shifting the accounting overseas. But taxing a company based on the location of its nominal headquarters can't work. We would be better off with other options, such as a wealth tax.

Giants briefed on Ebola

Even the sports world isn't safe from Ebola panic. Word came Wednesday that the Giants medical personnel briefed the team on the virus prior to this weekend's trip to Dallas, where a man died of the disease last week and two nurses treating him have tested positive for Ebola. Giants co-owner Steve Tisch was criticized two weeks ago after joking to TMZ that the Cowboys might get the disease, and it was "to [the Giants'] advantage."

3 Stories to watch in Jets versus Patriots

NFL. The Jets are playing like one of the worst teams in the NFL as they face their biggest rival.

The Jets face an incredibly tough challenge when they take a trip to New England on Thursday.

They're currently riding a five-game losing streak — the team's worst under head coach Rex Ryan.

The Patriots may not be quite as scary as in years past, but they're still the class of the AFC East and their offense is starting to heat up.

While the Jets aren't quite as bad as their 1-5 record would indicate, this team needs a win in the worst way. With another loss, they could well be poised to miss the postseason for a fourth straight season. And another year without the playoffs could mean a new head coach in 2015.

Metro takes a look at three storylines to watch as the Jets travel to face the Patriots on Thursday Night Football (8:30 p.m., CBS).

DARRELLE REVIS MAY
TORMENT THE JETS.

Secondary changes

The Jets secondary and their collective struggle is well documented this year, but New England's pass defense is the complete opposite.

The Pats rank third in the NFL, allowing just 208.5 yards per game. This could mean a long night for the Jets, whose passing offense is fourth worst in the league, averaging 182 yards per game. Remember when the New England secondary was the weakness of the team? The times, they are a-changin'. And yes, Darrelle Revis, the former Jet, is a big reason why. The three-time All-Pro with New York will be matched one-on-one with Eric Decker all night. We saw how poor the Jets were two weeks ago without their top receiver.

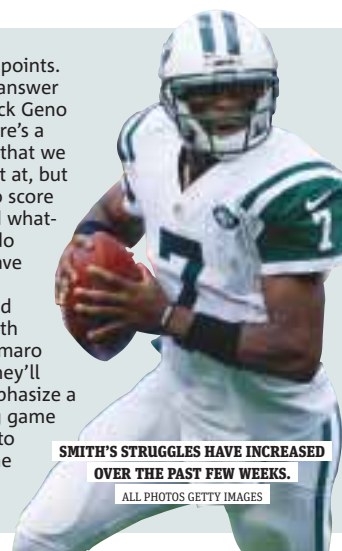

How about some points?

The Jets had a touchdown drive in the first quarter and the middle of the fourth quarter in last week's 31-17 loss to the Broncos. But smack in the middle of the game, the offense went colder than an ice cream parlor.

There's been inconsistency from the offense and the inability to sustain drives and move down the field puts undue pressure on the defense to play mistake-free football.

"Just scoring points. There's no easy answer to it," quarterback Geno Smith said. "There's a bunch of things that we can kind of point at, but we've just got to score more points and whatever it takes to do so is what we have to do."

The Jets found some success with tight end Jace Amaro last week, but they'll also have to emphasize a sagging running game if they're going to compete with the high-powered Patriots.

SMITH'S STRUGGLES HAVE INCREASED
OVER THE PAST FEW WEEKS.

Brady being Brady

His numbers aren't quite as majestic as years past, but Tom Brady is still getting it done up in Foxboro.

The Patriots quarterback is still on pace for 27 touchdowns and five interceptions despite a larger emphasis on the running game. It is especially impressive as the Pats have struggled in their pass protection. After scoring just 16 points in a narrow win over the Raiders in Week 3, the Pats are averaging 40 points per game in three straight blowout wins.

"I'm happy we're scoring more points. That's what we're going to need to do this week," Brady said. "The only way to score points is good execution on a consistent basis. I think that's probably what we've been doing better is executing better. But really, whatever's happened the past two weeks makes no difference going into this game because this is a totally different entity."

ONLY AARON RODGERS HAS A BETTER TD TO INTERCEPTION
RATIO THAN BRADY THIS SEASON.

On to the Cowboys

Giants rally around injury to Victor Cruz

The Giants are at a crossroads after coming off their worst defeat of the season.

And when accounting for the futile smack talk leading up last week's 27-0 shellacking by the hated Eagles, and with the suddenly elite Cowboys (5-1) next on the docket, the feeling the Giants should be experiencing is despair.

Safety Antrel Rolle, however, said the team is feeling anything but hopelessness.

"We're still confident," said Rolle. "I expect us to go in and play with some pride, play with some dignity ... play for [wideout] Vic [Cruz]. We need to go out and honor this guy. You always try and find a reason to play this game for something bigger than yourself and here's an opportunity to go out there and play for something extra."

The popular Cruz suffered a freak tear to his patella tendon in Philadelphia on Sunday and is out for the season. While life goes on for the Giants, Rolle said he thinks using Cruz as a rallying cry should spur them heading into Sunday's matchup in Dallas.

Strolling into Dallas and doing to the Cowboys what they did to Seattle is a daunting task, though.

"It was tough to swallow," cornerback Prince Amukamara said about watching the Eagles game film. "Especially with what went down all week with the talking. For them to respond how they did and for us to respond the way we did, just doesn't sit well with us. But now, we have a chance to redeem ourselves in Dallas."

"As a team, I personally thought we weren't as focused last Sunday and I did not think we reacted well to adversity during the game," said head coach Tom Coughlin.
